

Mr. Paul J. Ezekiel

Paul Ezekiel is a Managing Director for Credit Suisse where he runs the Bank's Global Carbon Trading business, based in New York. In addition to developing the carbon strategy for the Bank, he manages the Credit Suisse's relationships and investments in Offset producers, leveraging the Bank's premier Emerging Market franchise. These investments yield carbon credits that can be traded with its customers under the EUETS framework.

Mr. Ezekiel joined Credit Suisse in July 2006 from Antipodean Partners, a specialty merchant bank and advisory firm in the environmental and climate change industry, which he co-founded in 2002 and served as their President. Mr. Ezekiel was responsible for developing a number of innovative structures for carbon emissions producers, including pioneering securitizations of tradable greenhouse gas emissions credits.

Prior to establishing Antipodean, Mr. Ezekiel was a Managing Director at SoundView Technology Group (formerly Wit Capital) where he was head of financial services investment banking and before that worked at Banc of America, Securities.

Mr. Ezekiel has an MBA from Cornell University and is formerly an MD, having specialized in Neurosurgery.
